

RAY DENIED MARSHALL.

When the Star to Person
Saw Papers.

United States District Attorney H. H. Marshall was given today in which to sign the return papers in the case of the Attorney General against the United States of America. They were an adjournment until a later date. Judge Learned Hand said that the time is too precious to waste. Mr. Marshall and D. Cady Harbo, Henry M. Golding for Robert H. Marshall, the Attorney General, were to appear in the District Attorney's office.

Alkali in Soap
Bad For the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This makes the scalp, makes the hair brittle, ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary unscented coconut oil (which is pure and expensive), and is better than the most expensive soap or shampoo you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply rub the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dirt, dust, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and shiny, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get unscented coconut oil at any pharmacy. It is very cheap, and a few cents will supply every member of the family for months.—Adv.

LOOK WHO'S HERE!
MANATUS INUNGUIS
HAS HIT BROADWAY

She's the Aquarium's New Sea Cow, and It's No Cinch to Milk or Interview Her.

A NERVOUS MONSTER.

Looks Like a Combination of a Sugar-Cured Ham and a Flounder.

This is a story about a sea cow. If you happen to know a lot about sea cows there will probably be a lot of statements in the story that will irritate you, because the writer is willing to admit he probably knows less about the deep sea "flounder" than any other man living. To be truthful, this morning was the first time he ever met a sea cow face to face, so for the benefit of those who love sea cows, he wishes he understood at the outset that any reflections that may creep into the yarn are due to ignorance rather than malice.

"Take a photographer," ordered the city editor, and run down to the Aquarium and get us a snappy little story about the sea cow that has taken apartments there for the summer.

That's how the thing started. When the C. E. writes anything, it's up to the reporter to bring it back, dead or alive. So it was that, in company with a photographer, the reporter started out. All hope that the photographer might know something about the subject fled when the camera man asked with considerable trepidation:

"What the—what does a sea cow look like?"

The reporter confessed he didn't know, whereupon the apprehension of the photographer increased to such an extent he suggested halting a passing milkman and asking for information. Before a milkman could be found, however, the Aquarium had been reached.

A few seconds later and the Manatus inunguis—that's the sea cow's professional name—had been located. There he was, grazing in about two feet of water, chewing his cud, a large portion of cabbage. A sea cow looks like a combination of a sugar-cured ham and a flounder. He wears a scandalously tight one-piece suit of black silk material, the only touch of color in his dress being a pink shirt. He is about three feet long, about two feet across the chest and carries an extra tin of fat on the back of his neck.

He was so busy learning to swim he refused to stop circling the tank long enough for the photographer to get a shot at him.

"I'm sure I don't know how you're going to snap him," said one of the attendants.

"Couldn't you take him on your lap," suggested the photographer.

"Fine chance of holding a slippery thing like that," said the attendant. "I've got it," he added. "We'll let the water out of the tank and then you can get him."

When M. inunguis found they were pulling the lake out from under him he made a squealing protest.

"This specimen came from the headquarters of the Ananias," volunteered the attendant. "He?"

"What does that Manatus inunguis mean?" asked the writer.

"That's the species," was the prompt reply. "Inunguis means without hoofs. This one has only six neck vertebrae instead of seven."

"You don't mean it?" gasped the reporter.

"Honest. He has a double set of lips so he can eat under water. He's about a year old, I should say."

"What do you call him?"

"Huh! That's a funny one. A sea cow hasn't any ears. It wouldn't do any good to call him."

APPROPRIATE.

The Prohibition party has officially adopted as its emblem the camel, the same being able to go longer without water than any other living creature.

$10,000 LOSS, FIREMAN HURT IN BRONX BLAZE

100 Autos Imperilled as Flames Sweep Westchester Avenue Stores.

A section of one-story brick stores in Westchester Avenue, between Fox and Tiffany Streets, the Bronx, was wiped out by fire this morning. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

Two alarms were sent in and the flames threatened the Uneda Garage, around the corner in Fox Street, where 100 automobiles were stored. Firemen got the blaze under control after five buildings had been destroyed at No. 986, 988, 990, 992 and 994 Westchester Avenue.

Capt. Philip Harmon of Truck No. 21 fell through a trap door in No. 988 and received a number of bruises.

AMERICANS KILL 27
REBELS IN FIGHT
AT SAN DOMINGO

One U. S. Marine Slain and Eight Wounded During Clash—Natives Routed.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Routing 250 revolutionists, killing twenty-seven and capturing five, the American forces advancing on Santiago, San Domingo, last Saturday, suffered casualties of one killed, one seriously wounded and seven slightly hurt. The American slain was Corp. George Frazee.

The Americans under Col. Pemberton engaged the natives at Guayacana. The rebels were entrenched in a strong concealed position and this prevented the Americans from using their artillery in the advance. The enemy outposts opened fire, but the Americans, though taken by surprise, made a sharp attack, soon driving out the Dominicans in disorder. The number of the rebel wounded could not be ascertained.

Frazee's home was Canyon City, Col. Private J. E. Daley, Bookersville, Ky., was the seriously wounded man. Those slightly wounded were R. D. Putnam, Jefferson, Va.; Corp. Oscar J. Johnson, La Crosse, Wis.; Corp. J. A. Glavin, Detroit; Drummer G. E. Merriweather, Louisville, Ky.; Private W. F. Johnson, Shelby, Mich.; Private C. Oates, Seattle; Private F. R. Paine, Minneapolis.

The engagement evidently immediately preceded the peace negotiations, in which Admiral Caperton yesterday informed the department the revolutionists had agreed to disarm. The fight reported to-day was the fourth between United States marines and revolutionists in about a week. Officials believe that the complete rout of the revolutionists in the last encounter influenced their leaders to agree to disarmament.

WANAMAKER FOR G. O. P.
TREASURER, IS REPORT

Calls on Hughes and Willcox, but Tells Inquirers "There Is Nothing Definite Yet."

John Wanamaker called at the Hotel Astor to-day to hold a conference with Mr. Hughes and then with William R. Willcox, the campaign manager.

The report spread through the headquarters that Mr. Wanamaker was being considered for the position of National Committee Treasurer, to succeed George R. Sheldon, who has declined.

When Mr. Wanamaker left the headquarters he waved aside all inquiries and said there would be nothing definite until he had conferred again with Mr. Hughes.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond called on Mr. Hughes and offered whatever services she could command in his interests. Herbert L. Satterlee, F. A. Julliard, J. H. Martindale, George C. Higgins and Congressman Homer P. Snyder also were callers.

The sentiments of Mr. Hughes relative to suffrage were sounded to-day by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Mrs. Norman De R. Whitcomb and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw. Mrs. Catt said the conference was satisfactory.

The Far-Reaching Effect of Advertising in The New York World is strikingly instanced by the following incident:

On April 19 The Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation advertised for 50,000 subscribers to its stock at $100 a share.

A coupon was part of the advertisement.
On June 27 a registered letter was received by The Commonwealth Hotel Construction Co. containing a WORLD coupon with a subscription for stock.

It Came From Chefoo, China

Thus did THE WORLD serve as a link between the Continents; a medium of communication and mutually satisfactory business transaction between a great enterprise in New York and an American citizen of the American Consular Service in far-distant China.

The World's Circulation
Constitutes an audience that must not be overlooked in the planning of any advertising campaign.
